

Success Mindset

of a Creative Woman in Business

Thoughts become things, so the more care and attention you give to your mindset, the easier success will be for you to create.

A woman who takes herself seriously and is serious about her business absorbs and remembers the following:

- She commits to a no excuses policy
- She maintains a positive attitude
- She understands that things in life happen for her, not to her
- She understands that every problems is also born with a solution, and actively focuses on the solution
- She does not wallow, complain, whine, gossip, pity or engage in other low-vibrational behaviors
- She gives others the benefit of the doubt
- She surrounds herself with the people and information that are most in alignment with what she is working to create in her business and her life
- She is persistent and consistent in her positive thoughts and actions
- She does for herself first, then seeks assistance by asking smart questions
- She avoids and eliminates drama and overwhelm
- She chooses concern over worry, being proactive rather than spinning
- She plans ahead
- She knows that her desires are naturally meant for her, and available to her, and takes responsibility for fulfilling them
- She allows herself to be exactly where she is
- She allows herself to feel exactly what she's feeling
- She is connected to her personal sense of power and avoids giving it away
- She knows her worth and her value
- She shows up in the world, takes a seat at the table, raises her hand
- She has an abundance mindset
- She knows that money is a reward for services rendered and asks how she can serve more people over how she can make more money
- She practices self-care regularly in order to be the fully functioning head of her business and engaged in her life
- She is decisive, making up her mind and changing it rarely, if ever
- She seeks divine guidance, asking how she is meant to take action toward her goals
- She only engages in relationships that are mutually beneficial
